ASSET & SECTOR ALLOCATION (% OF NAV)

FUND MANAGER'S REPORT

The FBM KLCI slipped 0.3% in November to 1,604, while the FBM Emas Index fell 0.9% and the Small Cap Index declined sharply by 5.7%, reflecting weaker risk appetite. Foreign investors remained net sellers (~RM1.1b), though selling pressure moderated from October. Domestic institutions provided the main support with RM1.3b in net buying. Sector performance was mixed: financials led with +3%, followed by property and plantation, while technology, utilities, and healthcare lagged.

Market sentiment turned cautious due to weaker-than-expected 3Q earnings from selected heavyweights and a mild pullback in U.S. technology stocks after an extended AI-driven rally. Even so, the KLCI stayed resilient above 1,600. Macro data remained encouraging, with GDP expanding 5.2% in 3Q25, backed by strong household spending and tourism, while approved investments rose 13.2% YoY to RM285.2b. The Ringgit strengthened 1.3% to 4.13/USD as the Dollar Index softened. Brent crude fell 2.9% to USD63.2/bbl and CPO eased 2.1% to RM4,099/tonne.

Looking ahead, we remain cautiously optimistic. The MADANI Budget 2026 under the 13th Malaysia Plan (RMK13) supports fiscal reform, targeted subsidies, and investment in infrastructure and technology—laying a stronger foundation for long-term growth. Meanwhile, the U.S. easing cycle continues to improve risk appetite for emerging markets.

To cushion volatility, the Fund will continue to hold high-quality dividend yield names, particularly in financials, domestic REITs and utilities, while selectively accumulating oversold stocks during periods of weakness, focusing on companies with strong fundamentals and long-term secular growth potential.
